Alleged human traffickers in court

CRIME Three people have made their first court appearance in what Edmonton police say may be the city's first case of human trafficking.

Mei Fang Chen and Xiu Zheng Chen, both in their early 30s, and Qui Wang, who is 41, face numerous charges that include living off the avails of prostitution and keeping a common bawdy house.

They are scheduled to return to court Sept. 29 for a bail hearing.

Police have said they got word earlier this month that a suspected prostitution-related business was operating in a massage and health spa outlet.

Investigators later learned that three women who were also taken into custody during a search of the business were allegedly victims of human trafficking.

The women were placed in the care of a non-profit agency.

Training needed: Judge

Recommendation follows police shootout inquiry

VICTORIA HANDYSIDES
victoria.handysides@metronews.ca

Police need advanced emergency medical training to react in the face of potentially deadly situations, a provincial judge declared yesterday.

The recommendation followed a fatality inquiry of a police shootout in June 2006, when a handful of rookie cops stood "in shock" as both a suspect and fellow officer lay bleeding from gunshot wounds.

Const. Dan Furman would never have survived three shots fired by handgun-wielding Darren Cardinal if Const. Jason Mitchell hadn't applied specialized first-aid training he received in the Canadian Armed Forces.

"Furman testified that as he lay on the basement floor of the residence that night, he remembered a lot of EPS members were looking at him with blank faces. When he later asked them what they were thinking, they told him that they did not know what to do," provincial court judge Bruce Garriock wrote in a 20-page report.

Cardinal shot the officer

Starting soon

• Const. Dan Furman's proposal in 2008 that EPS members undergo casualty care training was initially put on hold due to budgetary concerns, though enhanced training will begin next month.

after police entered a home at 12840 - 68 St. Officers fired back, striking Cardinal 11 times.

Witnesses said Cardinal stated many times: "If the police showed up, they would not take him alive."

Having trained with wounds resulting from gunshots and explosives, Mitchell was familiar with Furman's condition, which included a punctured lung.

Furman was hospitalized for 11 days and off work for eight months. When he returned to duty in the summer of 2008, he proposed EPS members undergo casualty care training.

"Furman emphasized that the point of his proposal was to sustain life until medical training arrived by providing EPS members with the requisite knowledge and tools to deal with these exceptional circumstances," Garriock wrote.

52 months for man who killed pal

SENTENCE A northern Alberta man who killed a friend has been sentenced to 52 months in prison.

Richard Pfaff of High Level was convicted in July of manslaughter in the death of Michael Berube.

Pfaff, 24, was initially charged with second-degree murder after Berube was found strangled in a High Level residence in January of last year. Police said the two men knew each other and that the victim was strangled during a fight.

Protesters plead for homeless help

Rally aims to draw attention to financial plight of youth emergency shelters

victoria.handysides@metronews.ca

Frustrated protesters shouted to Premier Ed Stelmach from the steps of the Alberta legislature yesterday afternoon, taunting the provincial leader to address the growing issue of youth homelessness.

"There are a lot of people who choose not to look at a problem because it's hard to solve," Ryan Summer said. "Homelessness among people my age is a hard problem."

The 22-year-old has been living on the street for five years. An unemployed, recovering addict, Summers lives at the Hope Mission and says area shelters desperately need funding.

"We have kids sleeping in hotels and in the terrifying river valley," said rally organizer Brittany White. "I sit with them in the parks at night and bring them food."

White works at the Youth Emergency Shelter, though says she organized the rally for personal reasons.

She said teens become homeless for a number of reasons including poverty, addictions and family issues. When space at the youth shelter is gone, kids are forced into shelters with adults.

A recent Homeward Trust census concluded the number of homeless teens rose 18 per cent between 2006 and 2008, White said.

Last week, Bosco Homes announced the company's Strathcona County group home would be shutting its doors. White said though the province has committed to placing all Bosco's clients in existing programs, White says the closure could have a ripple effect.

"Whenever an agency shuts down, there is a huge fear. Our agencies are already overcrowded and there aren't enough resources for youth. Children should never be part of cutbacks for any reason," she said.

NAIT raising teepees, raising awareness

CARMEN WALL
for Metro Edmonton

EVENT They were a few poles short and it took a couple tries, but aboriginal students managed to raise a teepee on NAIT grounds.

The teepee-raising kicked off Aboriginal Awareness week at NAIT. Each day this week, students can participate in different interactive events that showcase Inuit, First Nations and Métis culture.

According to Cree elder Walter Bonaire, who directed the raising, it should only take about 15 minutes to set up a teepee. Yesterday it took an hour.

"There are too many chiefs and not enough Indians," he said.

Bonaire said the importance of raising a teepee is for young people to understand who they are as human beings.

"You have to be part of it to know it, here," he said, tapping his heart.

Valerie Pudnak and Keneth Young Chief put the finishing touches on the teepee erected yesterday at the NAIT campus to help kick off Aboriginal Awareness Week. Festivities celebrating Aboriginal, Métis and Inuit culture will take place at NAIT for the remainder of the week.

Student Wendal Houle said it's hard work to set up a teepee, but important work. Both he and Bonaire worry that the tradition is dying among the younger generation.

Derek Thunder, who works in the EnCana Aboriginal Centre on campus, says events like this are important to show students that NAIT is an all-inclusive institution that supports diversity.

Researchers from Alberta, Texas working together

TECHNOLOGY Researchers in Alberta and Texas say they plan to work together on scientific ideas that would cut energy industry pollution.

Some of the projects include developing technologies to reduce coal emissions, treat toxic tailings ponds and improve the efficiency of solar cells.

Premier Ed Stelmach says the agreement involves Alberta's Advanced Education Department and Rice University, which is located in Houston.

The research will focus on using nanotechnology — the manipulation of matter the size of atoms and molecules.

The province and the university are also working on safety guidelines for people who work in the nanotechnology field.

A wake-up call on climate

CARMEN WALL

Dozens of cellphone alarms went off simultaneously at the University of Alberta yesterday as a "wake-up call" for action on climate change.

Greenpeace on Campus organized a flash mob as one of 2,300 events that took place worldwide.

Students held their ringing phones in the air before calling government leaders to push them to keep climate change on the agenda before the 2009 UN climate change conference in Copenhagen.

MP Linda Duncan said the flash mob was a good way to ensure that young people called government representatives to press the issue of climate change.

"Copenhagen is too late; we need our government to act right now," said Duncan.

World leaders are expected to meet in New York today to revive climate change negotiations.

Italian cardinal says civility on the decline

A top Italian cardinal complained yesterday that civility was on the decline in Italy after a prominent Catholic editor was forced to resign after a newspaper loyal to Prime Minister Silvio Berlusconi exposed a scandal in his past.

Cardinal Angelo Bagnasco, the head of Italy's influential bishops' conference, denounced what he called a "grave" attack against the Dino Boffo, editor of the Italian bishops' daily newspaper Avvenire, by the Berlusconi family newspaper Il Giornale.

Earlier this month, Il Giornale reported that Boffo had been fined in a plea-bargain several years ago for making harassing calls to the wife of a man in whom he was purportedly

'Constructive'

• Cardinal Angelo Bagnasco insisted that the Catholic church aimed to be a constructive presence in the country, a response to critics who say the church intrudes too much in Italian political life with its calls for Catholic politicians to toe church teaching in their public and private lives.

interested.

Il Giornale published the article after Avvenire had demanded Berlusconi answer questions about his own sex scandal, including revelations that women had been paid to attend parties at his residences and that a high-class prostitute had once spent the night with him.

Berlusconi has denied paying anyone for sex and has denounced what he has called a media-driven smear campaign against him.

Boffo acknowledged being fined in the harassment case but said someone else had used his cellphone to make the calls.

Prosecutors maintain Boffo made the calls, but have denied there was any gay angle to the case.

Boffo has insisted that the full court file remain sealed.

The tit-for-tat newspaper attacks strained ties between Berlusconi's conservative government and the Catholic church.

In a speech to the annual assembly of Italian bishops, Bagnasco said the "bitter" episode had "in the end touched us all."

Prime minister's socialist hookup

NationalReport

Lawrence Martin

metronews.ca/nationalreport

Everything was going the Conservatives' way. They were building a good lead in the polls. The recovering economy was working in Stephen Harper's favour. Michael Ignatieff had nothing in his department store window. His pushing for an unwanted election appeared to be backfiring.

But then, the big retreat. Harper looked at the flavourful prospects, turned and walked away. He caved to NDP demands on employment insurance to avoid going to the polls.

It's not in the prime minister's stern character to back off like that. The prime motivation, it appears, is he decided a majority was not in the offing. To survive he pretty much needs that majority and he wasn't about to take the risk of not getting it.

Harper didn't suffer for his decision. He could have been whacked for chickening out. He could have been mocked for relying on a coalition of sorts to avoid defeat in Parliament — this, having decried the whole idea of anyone aligning with socialists and separatists. But there's a lot of conservative media in this land. They gave him a pass. Instead, it was the NDP that — weirdly — took the brunt of the criticism. The New Democrats had been pushing for a more generous EI system. They got the government to come their way. Canadians didn't want an election now. The NDP's acceptance of the PM's reforms avoided one. Good on both counts. But instead of receiving plaudits, the Dippers lost the spin game. Even though their polling is close to traditional levels, they were viewed as being desperate to avoid an election.

It's true the New Democrats had long mocked the Liberals for propping up the government and here was Jack Layton doing that very thing. But, unlike the Liberals, this was only one time. And EI reform was not a bad reason. The party had the image of being knee-jerk — of opposing everything the Conservatives did just for the sake of opposing them. This time they looked to be acting rather responsibly.

As for the Harper Conservatives, they have demonstrated a willingness to compromise and have likely assured themselves another six months in power. They could still be defeated on a confidence vote this fall, but it's less likely.

Harper is gambling that his support will increase in the months to come. He decided that if he had to change his stripes and be in league with socialists, so be it. It's politics. Shift happens.

1Mtweets a revolutionary movement

Dr. Becky Reuber

We all recognize Canadian inventiveness in cool products like the BlackBerry and Lululemon gear. But yesterday was a watershed day in Canadian innovation with the launch of A Million Tweets to Remember, a movement that is revolutionizing the way social causes connect with online communities.

A Million Tweets to Remember — or 1Mtweets in the online world — seeks to digitally memorialize one million people who have lived with Alzheimer's disease. Built on Twitter, the 1Mtweets website allows family and friends to tweet about the Alzheimer's sufferer they are memorializing and to make a donation to research on the aging brain.

Tweeters can also create a multimedia web page — called a twibute — for their loved one to expand the thoughts in their tweet. One in three of us knows someone with Alzheimer's and through a twibute we can give our children a portrait of who they once were.

What's groundbreaking about A Million Tweets to Remember is that it unleashes the power of social networks for a philanthropic cause. Many of us have joined online communities and even more of us have contributed to charities. The 1Mtweets movement shows how these two aspects of our lives can be brought together.

Not surprisingly, then, Jordan Banks, the founder of A Million Tweets to Remember, is a star in both fields. "The sense of community on Twitter is incredible, making it a great resource to raise awareness for Alzheimer's and memorialize those who have lived with this devastating disease," Banks says.

A Million Tweets to Remember will be the largest movement to date on Twitter and will hopefully raise a lot of money for research on Alzheimer's. Most importantly, it will be the largest archive ever created of people with dementia.

Just last week, U.S.-based marketing guru Seth Godin commented on the power of online social communities and asked, "But where are the charities?"

Look north, Seth, look north to Canada. And check out 1Mtweets.com.

Reichmann exits Canary Wharf Group

British media report that Canadian businessman Paul Reichmann has given up his stake in the London Docklands development, marking the end of his 22-year involvement with the site.

According to reports in several British newspapers Songbird Estates has announced that it has increased its shareholding in Canary Wharf Group to 69.3 per cent after acquiring an 8.45 per cent holding from Commerzbank for 112.5 million British pounds.

Reichmann, 78, was the brains behind the landmark development, a massive complex that covers more than 38 hectares, after brokering a deal with then prime minister Margaret Thatcher in 1987.

The project led his Toronto company, Olympia & York, one of the biggest real estate developers in the world, into bankruptcy in 1992. He fought back, reacquiring Canary Wharf from banks in 1995.

Former Norbourg president pleads guilty to 200 criminal charges

MONTREAL After spending years steadfastly proclaiming his innocence, accused trust-fund scammer Vincent Lacroix shocked a courtroom yesterday by pleading guilty to 200 fraud-related charges.

The former head of Norbourg Inc. entered the pleas in Quebec Superior Court and immediately was sent to prison.

He apparently came to court prepared. He was toting a gym bag and wearing running shoes and a casual sweater.

Sentencing arguments will be heard Friday. Jury selection will continue for the five other co-accused in the case.

Car Insurance Roadblock

Consumers concerned insurers don't want drivers with tickets or accidents

Worried Your Spotted Driving Record Means You've Got Nowhere To Turn For Car Insurance?

Don't be. While it's true that, all things being equal, your tickets and accidents make you a more expensive risk to insure than a similar car and driver with a clean driving record, that doesn't mean you should have trouble finding insurance – assuming you know where to look. Different insurance companies target different types of business and this is reflected in things like their claims service, marketing efforts, discounts, and most importantly for you, their rates.

Should I Just Accept That I'll Have To Pay A Bundle?

No. Sadly, this is a mistake many drivers make and it can be a costly one, especially if they don't bother to shop around for the lowest rate available. The key to finding the best rate, especially if you have tickets or accidents on your driving record, is to figure out which insurance company of the more than 20 in Alberta has the best rate for your particular situation. And with rates varying so wildly across companies, chances are you are not with the company that has the lowest rate for your profile right now.

Start Saving Your Money Now.

InsuranceHotline.com puts you in the driver seat by making insurance companies compete for your business. With quotes from over 20 of the top insurance companies, InsuranceHotline.com is the simplest and easiest way to make sure you aren't overpaying for your car insurance – and it's completely FREE to use. ## IRS extends amnesty deadline for dodgers

TAXES Tax dodgers who hid assets overseas will get a few extra weeks to apply for an amnesty program that has been flooded with applications ahead of tomorrow's deadline.

The Internal Revenue Service said yesterday the deadline will be extended until Oct. 15. More than 3,000 Americans have applied for the program, which promises no jail time and reduced penalties for tax cheats who come forward, said a government official who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to speak on the record ahead of the public announcement.

The IRS is extending the Wednesday deadline to give a rush of applicants more time to prepare their paperwork.

The IRS long has had a policy that certain tax evaders who come forward before they are contacted by the agency usually can avoid jail time as long as they agree to pay back taxes, interest and hefty penalties. Drug dealers and money launderers need not apply. But if the money was earned legally, tax evaders can usually avoid criminal prosecution.

Fewer than 100 people apply for the program in a typical year, in part because the penalties can far exceed the value of the hidden account, depending on how long the account holder has evaded U.S. taxes. But in March, the IRS began a six-month amnesty program.

Female trader files suit against RBC

Top performer claims gender bias over dismissal after dating alleged Ponzi schemer

A top-performing female trader has sued RBC Capital Markets for gender bias over her dismissal, which she said stemmed from her dating a hedge fund manager later charged with fraud for running a Ponzi scheme.

In a lawsuit filed late Friday with the U.S. District Court in Manhattan, the trader, Lindy Boville, accused RBC of using her relationship with James Nicholson as a pretext for firing her in March 2009 and assigning her accounts to male colleagues.

The Toronto resident, who had worked in RBC's New York office, said she dated Nicholson on and off between March 2008 and February 2009 but had no business dealings with him.

She said male colleagues who did work with Nicholson were not punished by RBC, a unit of Royal Bank of Canada.

Nicholson ran Westgate Capital Management LLC in Pearl River, N.Y., prior to his Feb. 25 arrest.

A grand jury in April indicted him for fraud for

Claims

The lawsuit also said that prior to being fired, Lindy Boville was subjected to repeated advances and graphic comments about her appearance by male colleagues at RBC. She accused one of using a made-up word "sensy" rather than "sexy" to describe her clothing so that RBC's monitoring system would not pick up his language running an alleged Ponzi scheme since 2004 that caused $150 million of investor losses.

Boville said RBC later filed a termination notice that falsely said she "showed poor judgment in financing efforts for hedge fund"

This notice has made it hard for her to find a new job and caused one employment offer to be rescinded, she said.

In response to the lawsuit, RBC spokesman Kevin Foster said in an email: "Ms. Boville showed poor judgment in helping Jim Nicholson raise money for his hedge fund and failing to disclose her activities to her supervisors. It is irrelevant that she had a personal relationship with Nicholson, and she should have told RBC what she was doing."

A lawyer for Nicholson did not immediately return a call seeking comment.

The lawsuit said Boville joined RBC in September 2007 after being heavily recruited by the Canadian bank and by Goldman Sachs Group Inc.

U.S. activity forecast rises for fifth time

ECONOMY A private forecast of U.S. economic activity rose in August for the fifth straight month, the latest sign the recession has ended. The Conference's Board leading indicators point to an economy on solid ground early next year, though some analysts caution that a rising unemployment rate will restrain growth.

The Conference Board said yesterday its index of leading indicators rose 0.6 per cent in August. That follows a 0.9 per cent gain in July revised up from 0.6 per cent. Economists surveyed by Thomson Reuters had expected a 0.7 per cent gain last month.

The indicators are designed to project economic activity in the next three to six months.

The August results support many analysts' projections that the economy started growing again in the current July-September quarter and will continue to gain in the fourth quarter.

Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke last week said the recession was "very likely over."

The recession's end "is no longer a source of heated discussion ... but whether or not the economy can keep grinding forward (and at what speed) is still a big question mark," Jennifer Lee, an economist at BMO Capital Markets, wrote in a note to clients yesterday.

Analysts worry that any economic growth will falter as unemployment rises from the August rate of 9.7 per cent to above 10 per cent.

Can you afford to buy a home?

Alison's Money Rule:

- Don't even think of making an offer on a house or condo until you've completed a Can I Afford My Home budget.

all is often a great time to shop for a home. New home and condo builders are anxious to clear inventory and other sellers don't want to hit the winter real estate doldrums. With the recession entering into history, you might be thinking now's the time to strike.

Usually, I recommend doing window shopping before making major purchases. Not with home buying. There's way too much emotion compounded by real estate agents who are skilled at instilling a sense of urgency. The minute you start looking, you'll want to start buying.

Instead, start a house hunt with a Can I Afford My Home budget. If you have mortgage pre-approval you know the interest rate and can work out payments. Don't forget the land transfer tax. Go to realtor.ca and use the mortgage and tax calculators for properties in your price range. Add legal costs and insurance if you have a high ratio mortgage.

You have your expected mortgage payment — next, move on to your monthly housing nut. This includes condo fees, parking, property tax and insurance.

A call to your current agent can get you a rough insurance figure and a search of MLS listings in the area will do the same for taxes. Estimate utilities. You should also count on spending on maintenance, repairs and decorating.

Now you have your monthly figure — ask yourself, can I afford it? If yes, go home shopping. If no, adjust your price point.

Guidelines for caregivers

MoneyMatters

metronews.ca/moneymatters

Q Three months ago, my widowed father hired a caregiver who comes to his condo. She cooks, cleans, runs errands and is great for company. My father is 74 years old and legally blind with some physical disabilities. Recently, I was looking over his last bank statement and noticed several withdrawals that I asked him about. He was unable to explain what they were for. The caregiver helps him sign cheques and has access to his bank PIN. What can I do, so this does not happen again?

— Terry

A Good caregivers do become very close to their charges. They take over roles that were previously performed by family members. That said, an employer and employee can have a cordial relationship, as in any business. But there must be guidelines and controls in place to protect and benefit both parties.

It is in your father and caregiver's interest to maintain a professional employer-employee relationship. The caregiver should not be given responsibilities beyond what she was hired. It is not fair for her to take on tasks where her character and integrity may be in question.

Power of attorney to access bank accounts should be restricted to the bank holder or a family member. Unauthorized individuals should not use bank cards and PINs.

Unfortunately, when you are dealing with money, it tends to disappear faster than a magician's sleight

Family ties

Family members should check regularly:

- Banking access and authorization.
- Changes to wills, etc., with lawyers.
- Investment accounts.
- Accountants and financial advisers.

of hand, now you see it, now you don't. What follows are horror stories by worker and employer alike. Family members must take a more active role. Great as they may be, "caregivers do not a family make."

To avoid penalties by Canada Revenue Agency, caregivers should be on the payroll and file remittances periodically. T4s should be issued at year-end.

Direct investing can help you lower your cost of investing.

Take control of your money

RAFAEL BRUSILOV
for Metro Canada

The rewards of good investments are well-known, but if the mandatory costs of investing feel daunting, it could be time to cut out the middleman and take command of your own money.

If you like taking the reins of your own invest-

Jason Storsley, CEO of RBC Direct Investing

ments and like seeing as little of your hard-earned money go to waste as possible, direct investing online can help you lower your cost of investing substantially while letting you build your success one trade at a time.

Jason Storsley, president and CEO of RBC Direct Investing, says buying and selling stocks and other investments yourself is easier than ever because online brokerage tools have become more sophisticated and accessible.

"The development of the Internet has certainly shaped the way consumers get information, and there are more ways than ever to get started and succeed.

"It has never been easier to become a direct investor," Storsley said.

High-priced commission fees may have kept some people away from the prospect of direct investing in the past, but fees have dropped off about 47 per cent since 2005.

Direct investors who trade frequently with RBC can even achieve rates as low as $6.95 or $9.95 per month — a huge savings over RBC's standard commission fees of $28.95 per month.

"There are substantial savings for investors who are willing to do their own research and make their own decisions," Storsley said.

"The lower fees can have a great impact on the bottom line and it adds up over time for sure," he added.

The sheer wealth of online investment research tools available, from price performance trackers to professional investment comparison tools, can give you a more informed and impartial view at the big investment picture — as long as you are willing to study the numbers yourself.

"With an adviser, you will get that adviser's view," Storsley said. "With the online site, you'll get to take a look at everything available and perhaps make a more informed decision."

For investors who dabble in mutual funds and want to keep their portfolios filled while they save, RBC offers a special line of Series D funds, which feature management expense ratios (MERs) frequently rated at half or better than the industry average. They also incur no service charges, no transaction fees and no load — that means lower

What's the cost?

The cost of investing is a huge factor in making your investment decisions and direct investment options at RBC can help take substantial cost out of the equation.

- Low per-trade direct investment fees: Make 30 or more trades each quarter to score a $9.95 per-trade commission rate with an RBC Direct Investing account. Make 150 or more trades in the same period to garner an even more frugal $6.95 rate per trade — the more you trade, the more you save.

- Half-sized fees for full-sized returns: RBC Series D mutual fund options for direct investors let you invest under a fee structure that averages half the industry standard with no load, service or transaction fees added, meaning your money works for you with less going to waste.

- Practice makes perfect: A practice account at RBC lets you test the waters and build confidence in your investment ideas without having to risk a single cent, all while using all the same sophisticated tools you'd use to make a real investment.

investment fees for the same investment dollar, a great offering that Storsley expects will strike a chord with seasoned investors.

"We've seen a huge erosion of wealth and investors have become more conscious of it," Storsley said.

"They're looking for less expensive ways to get the same options they would have in the past."

For first-time investors or those who don't feel quite ready to re-invest just yet, an RBC practice account can be an ideal way to test-drive your investment ideas and ambitions without having to worry about making mistakes. Opening a practice account is completely free and gives you $100,000 in practice money to invest however you'd like, while using all the exact same tools, resources and calculations as a real-money account.

"It's a great way to experience real investing without having to risk real money, and it can really help you build confidence. It gives you a risk-free environment to test your investment strategies," Storsley said.

The desire to win at next year's Winter Olympics has outstripped Canada's sense of sportsmanship, according to the executive director of USA Luge.

Ron Rossi says a 30-year-old agreement between the American and Canadians — in which both nations allowed each other's teams unprecedented access to their luge tracks — has fallen apart.

Canadian lugers were allowed as many as 500 extra training runs in Salt Lake City, but Americans have only been offered 18 training runs on 2010 tracks, Rossi said.

"The Canadians have given out the proper amount of training that's prescribed in the rule book," he said. "But we've had a relationship, and it's been rendered of no value. I guess I take it a little personally."

"The desire of winning has outstripped the honour of sportsmanship," Rossi added.

American long-track speed skaters are also complaining of similar parsimony.

No gold at home

• Canada has failed to win a gold medal at both Olympics on home soil — Montreal in 1976 and Calgary in 1988.

In the year leading up to the 2002 Winter Games, foreign skaters were given unlimited training access at the Utah Olympic Oval, said Marc Norman, facility operator at the venue in Salt Lake City.

He said it's "a little surprising" the Richmond Oval has only given foreign skaters two weeks to train.

VANOC CEO John Fur-

long said the organizing committee is playing by the rules and is simply ensuring our athletes benefit from home field advantage.

"Foreign athletes are getting fair access," he said, adding it's standard for the home country to have home field advantage.

Separate beds ... sound sleep

Shared bed may not be healthy, says study

The J Spot

Josey Vogels

Beyonce and hubby Jay-Z made it trendy when it was rumoured that they sleep separately, even going so far as to rent separate hotel rooms when they travel together.

But now, it's scientific fact. Sleeping together may actually be bad for your health.

Sleep specialist Dr. Neil Stanley, head of one of Britain's leading sleep labs, recently told the British Science Festival that while couples believed they slept better with their partner, evidence has proved that couples suffer 50 per cent more sleep disturbances if they share a bed.

The resulting lousy night's sleep can be linked to everything from depression to heart disease, strokes, traffic and industrial accidents and even divorce.

Of course, this news goes against conventional wisdom. As a culture, we believe that separately is a sign of trouble in paradise that leads to marital doom.

But Stanley, who sleeps separately from his wife, says that historically, couples sharing a bed wasn't even common until the industrial revolution, when people moved to overcrowded towns and cities and living space was limited.

In ancient Rome, for example, the marital bed was for one thing, and that wasn't sleeping.

I've long believed that sleeping apart — even having separate bedrooms — can actually be good for a relationship. Not only do you get a decent night's

Personal Gourmet recipe of the month

ROSE REISMAN

Breakfast for success

We all know that breakfast is the most important meal of the day. Unfortunately, more than half of us skip it due to a variety of reasons.

All of us, and especially children of school age, need to eat healthy, balanced diets to give them the energy and brain power to get through their days. However, that doesn't often happen.

Having raised four children, I know that nutritious meals are key to healthy and energetic children, so this year I have become the new spokesperson for the national Breakfast for Learning foundation, an organization that focuses on educating children on nutrition in our schools.

Rose's Whole Wheat Nut'n'Fruit Granola

Here's one breakfast recipe to get you started:

Rose's Whole Wheat Nut 'n' Fruit Granola

You'll never want to eat packaged granola again after you try this. This is the number-one breakfast food in my catering company. It also has fewer calories and less fat than other granolas due to a smaller amount of oil and the use of apple juice and maple syrup. Serve with yogurt or milk.

PREP TIME: 15 MINUTES

COOK TIME: 35 MINUTES

MAKES 4 CUPS

INGREDIENTS:

- 2 cups large rolled oats
- 1/2 cup whole wheat flour
- 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
- 1 tsp cinnamon
- 1/2 tsp ground ginger
- 3 tbsp vegetable oil
- 1/4 cup apple juice

- 3 tbsp maple syrup
- 1/2 cup chopped nuts of your choice
- 1/4 cup chopped dried apricots
- 1/4 cup chopped dried cranberries

METHOD:

Preheat the oven to 300°F. Line a baking sheet with foil and spray with vegetable oil.

Combine the oats, flour, brown sugar, cinnamon, ginger, oil, apple juice, maple syrup and nuts in a large mixing bowl and stir to combine.

Spread the mixture out on the prepared baking sheet and bake for 35 minutes, tossing once to prevent burning.

CHRIS ALEXANDER
for Metro Canada

Back in 1980, when maverick U.K. filmmaker Alan Parker released his immensely popular, generation defining musical drama Fame, times were considerably different.

The movie examined the lives of a select group of young aspiring performers at New York City's High School for the Performing Arts, giving people an intimate — often off-colour — but always honest portrait of the dreams and passions of youth.

Next week sees the release of the glossy, state of the art remake of Fame, a film that is being billed as a "re-imagining" of the source. And while this Fame still touches on the same themes and high energy performances, the novelty may have worn off a bit, especially in this age of reality TV equivalents American Idol and more resonantly, So You Think You Can Dance, a program that co-star Kherington Payne is more than a little bit familiar with.

"I think we had to take a different approach than the original did," Payne, who herself was a top 10 finalist and fan favourite on So You Think You Can Dance last year, says.

"The world of the performing arts isn't as secret as it was when the first film was released. Things have changed so our Fame is a fresh perspective."

One of the major differences between the two versions is the target audience. The original picture was rated R due to the level of frank language and sexuality, the new version opts for a lighter approach.

"This is a PG all the way," says Payne.

"The movie is designed for families, to inspire kids of all ages and just be entertaining without offending anyone."

In Fame, Payne was chosen from a staggering array of hopefuls to play the beautiful, leggy dancer Alice. But her presence, good looks and most importantly, her impossibly accomplished skills as a dancer shone through. When she was voted off So You Think You Can Dance, it was a shock, both for audiences who believed she'd go all the way and for Payne herself. But, despite her public heartbreak, she rebounded spectacularly and regrets nothing.

"Rejection hurts, I won't lie," says the newly minted actress.

"But you can't let it get you down. Really, it thickened my skin and without it, I wouldn't be where I am now."

Atwood, Michaels make Giller long list

BOOKS Margaret Atwood and Anne Michaels headline a Scotiabank Giller Prize long list that boasts 10 female writers and just two men.

Atwood is in the running for The Year of the Flood, about the near demise of humanity, while Michaels is up for The Winter Vault, her first novel since 1996's acclaimed Fugitive Pieces.

The short list will be announced Oct. 6 while the winner is to be unveiled Nov. 10.

The Giller Prize is worth $50,000.

The men on the list are CBC journalist Linden MacIntyre for his novel about religious scandal entitled, The Bishop's Man, and Colin McAdam for his novel, Fall.

This year's jury is made up of short story writer Russell Banks, British author Victoria Glendinning and Canadian writer Alisair MacLeod.

F--ked Up take Polaris Prize

Hardcore band picked by critics for $20,000 award

BRYAN BORZYKOWSKI
for Metro Canada

The Polaris Music Prize might not be the most well-known music award in Canada, but for Toronto hardcore band F--ked Up, it's the only one that matters.

The six-piece, which released The Chemistry of Common Life last October, won the fourth annual prize at a gala event last night. Besides the album being crowned the best disc of 2008-09, the group takes home a $20,000 cheque.

While the money helps, it's the international acclaim that comes with the award that's the real prize. Unlike the Junos, the nominees for the annual prize are mostly under-the-radar acts — nominees such as Hey Rosetta!, Malajube and Chad VanGaalén aren't selling thousands of records — so increased attention is a major career boost for these musicians.

Last night, the award was handed out for the fourth time at a glitzy gala hosted by CBC Radio 3's Grant Lawrence and MuchMusic's Sarah Taylor. And while there was only one winner, it was still a successful night for all of the 10 nominated acts.

That's because the gala, which was broadcast live on Sirius Satellite Radio and muchmusic.com, included performances from the 10 artists. Each act ran through two songs, and while they were all engaging, standouts included an acoustic version of Metric's Help, I'm Alive Off Fantasies, Great Lake Swimmers' sweet folk tune Still, and Joel Plaskett's haunting rendition of Heartless, Heartless.

Besides the aforemen-

Toronto hardcore act F--ked Up won the Polaris Prize, awarded last night.

tioned acts, other nominees included Toronto folk group Elliott Brood, Somali-born rapper K'Naan and 2007 Polaris winner Patrick Watson.

This is actually the first time in the prize's history that past nominees — like K'Naan, Malajube and Metric — have been up for the award again.

Helen Spitzer, one of the 182 Canadian journalists who cast a vote in July to determine the long and short lists (11 of the jury members picked the winner), says having repeat artists is both a plus and a negative for the award.

"It says that jurors across the country need to be digging a little deeper and getting outside of their comfort zone as far as the music they listen too goes," she said.

"But at the same time, I think both the Metric and Patrick Watson records are significantly better than previously nominated albums."

As always, the competition was fierce. Joel Plaskett's album might be the most ambitious record — he wrote 27 songs, mostly about life on the road and coming home — but Metric's solid new-wave effort, their best since 2003's Old World Underground, and K'Naan's cross-genre hip-hop release, are packed with stellar songs from front to back.

No one would argue that every artist deserves the cheque, but F--ked Up's pop-meets-hardcore disc was one of the most refreshing and original albums of the year — so it's no surprise they took the prize.

Among the celebrities that died this summer are, above, Michael Jackson, and left, Farrah Fawcett and Adam (DJ AM) Goldstein.

Summer of Death '09

We had been told to expect the deaths of the famous to come in threes, not in the dozens.

But all through the summer of 2009 came a ceaseless and sombre drumbeat, as idols passed away. From Walter Cronkite to Sen. Ted Kennedy, the nonstop loss of luminaries continued almost as if a seasonal occurrence — as summer as hot dogs and humidity.

News outlets went heavy on coverage for the many others who passed, most notably Michael Jackson; a

"Twitter feeds go out. Every death seems to become more of a tempest rather than just the simple news of what it is."

Adam Bernstein, obituary editor

Pew Research Center poll in July found that 64 per cent of those surveyed thought the media blitz was overdone. Collectively, it made the constant commemorating hard to escape, especially for anyone active on social networks and the web.

"It's relentless because of the impact of the Internet," said Adam Bernstein, the obituary editor of the Washington Post. "Twitter feeds go out. Every death seems to become more of a tempest rather than just the simple news of what it is."

Still, the parade of deaths was unusual. The phrase "summer of death" popped up, perhaps first used by New York magazine, which cheekily claimed the trademark. There's no particular reason for such an aberration; the death rate is typically higher during winter.

Two icons of Generation X died. First was the news that Farrah Fawcett, the '70s sex symbol and Charlie's Angels star, had died of cancer at 62. Later on in the day came the more unbelievable reports that Jackson had died.

August saw the death of Brat Pack film writer-director John Hughes at 59, Special Olympics founder Eunice Kennedy Shriver and her brother Edward M. Kennedy at age 77.

On Aug. 28 followed Adam (DJ AM) Goldstein, the 36-year-old disc jockey. Other passings this summer: Actor David Carra-dine, 72, Johnny Carson's sidekick Ed McMahon at 86, premier TV anchorman Cronkite, Patrick Swayze last week, and folk singer Mary Travers.

No one who ever picked up a guitar, danced to Thriller, watched a quality TV news broadcast or laughed through a coming-of-age comedy could have failed to feel the loss.

Ghosts of Girlfriends Past

Director: Mark Waters

MATTHEW MCCONAUGHEY is a cad and a bounder in this update of Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol, and here's where things gets interesting.

He deliberately curdles his cuteness, a risky thing for an actor who depends on it. His loathsome Connor Mead uses his good looks to attract, use and then discard women.

He's jousting with Jennifer Garner and bantering with Michael Douglas, but he's ripe for comeuppance, and he's about to get it the way Ebenezer Scrooge did.

The ending is never in doubt, yet even knowing all this, Ghosts is a pleasure to watch. No recent romcom has had such wicked fun with formula, and a lot of this is due to the script by Jon Lucas and Scott Moore, who also co-scripted The Hangover. For director Mark Waters, it's a return to Mean Girls sharpness.

Most of all it's a roll of the dice for McConaughy, who risks losing his audience by playing a character who is so hard to like.

There are no special features.

Observe and Report

Director: Jody Hill

A SICK AND UNFUNNY fantasy about a loathsome mall cop named Ronnie Barnhardt, played against type by the usually adorable Seth Rogen, whose oversized ego is the inverse of his crew-cut-covered pea brain.

Consumed by rage and feelings of inadequacy — he lives at home with his drunken mom (Celia Weston) — the tightly wound Ronnie treats his suburban Forest Ridge Mall as a battlefield. Barnhardt advocates using guns, Tasers and billy clubs to settle any dispute, big or small. It beggars credulity to think a man this unhinged would be allowed in a civilized society to get away with the sociopathic acts Ronnie commits — which include date rape, scores of brutal beatings (police officers included) and possibly even a few killings (he brags of six).

Writer/director Jody Hill (The Foot Fist Way) evidently intends his film to be satirical. But satire, even the absurd variety, requires intelligence to succeed. Yes, this is no Paul Blart: Mall Cop.

Extras include three featurettes, a gag reel and commentary by Jody Hill, Seth Rogen and Anna Farris.

O'Horten

Director: Bent Hamer

BENT HAMER'S latest distillation of Scandinavian wit is a bit o' wintry whimsy about a retired train driver who goes off the rails as soon as he leaves the track.

Odd Horten (Bård Ove) is great at keeping schedules but lousy at making connections. He's driven the Oslo-Bergen run for more than 40 years, content to keep going back and forth with nothing more than his pipe to keep him warm at nights.

Until the night of his final run, when O'Horten discovers the train of life doesn't need a destination. Hamer has an ideal accomplice in actor Owe, who wraps O'Horten in a snugly sweater of mystery yet still conveys the fire within.

Emmys audience grows on TV

STATS The Emmy Awards can boast of an audience bigger than it's been in three years, despite some tough competition from pro football.

The Nielsen Company estimates that 13.3 million people watched Sunday's Emmy telecast. That's one million more than last year's show, which was the least-watched Emmys ever, and the most since the 16.1 million who watched in 2006.

This increase came despite a Giants-Cowboys game on NBC that scored the best overnight ratings of any prime time pro football game in 11 years.

Being Erica

Let's hope Erica learned from her attempt to prevent her brother's death at the end of last season. She went back in time to repair the damage she'd caused in the present, but things are still different since she got back. Dr. Tom is no longer her therapist and time-travel mentor. But that doesn't mean an end to her blasts into the past in the season premiere, "Being Dr. Tom." 9 PM on CBXT

After 10 months of dating, actor John Krasinski knew it was time to propose to his now-fiancée Emily Blunt. "So many people say, 'You know when you know,' and it's true," he said, adding, "it was a tough gig, but somebody had to do it." METRO NEWS SERVICES

MJ's 'son' Omer to play him in biopic

A LITTLE TOO LITERAL Michael Jackson's "son" is to play him in a new film.

Omer Bhatti — whom the late King of Pop allegedly told friends he had fathered — will play Jackson in a movie charting his rise to superstardom in the '80s, femalefirst.co.uk reports.

A source told Britain's The Sun: "The family feel fans would love to see a dramatic retelling. They want to cover his childhood and family life but really focus on when his career went into overdrive."

Although the Norwegian Bhatti — who has worked as a Michael Jackson impersonator — denies Jackson is his biological father, he has revealed the singer used to tell him he was "like a son" to him.

He was also welcomed by the Jackson family and sat in the front row at Jackson's Los Angeles memorial service in July, and has reportedly been staying at the Jackson family home since his death.

It has also been reported that the Ferris wheel at Jackson's Neverland Ranch has been enjoying a second life after an amusement company picked it up at an auction that liquidated items from the estate last year, according to the Associated Press.

"We ourselves really didn't advertise it," said Theresa Noerper of Archway Amusements. "When he died, it kind of blew up. There's no keeping secrets then."

Jackson fans have reportedly been showing up as the wheel tours the south, paying respects and taking pictures.

Fat and K-Fed knows it

SELF-ASSURED Talk about Kevin Federline's ghastly weight gain all you want. "He doesn't care," his ex Shar Jackson told us-magazine.com Sunday. "The beautiful thing about him is that he could care less."

Jackson said that he still manages to phone the two children he has with her: Kori, 7, and Kaleb, 5.

"He calls them all the time," she told Us. "They have good long phone conversations."

I'm like, 'Ok, that's good. Hang up the phone 'cause we have stuff to do.'"

Jackson said she is also proud of Spears — whom she once loathed. (Spears began dating Federline while Jackson was pregnant with her second child.)

"She seems like she's doing well," Jackson told Us of Spears, who was hospitalized twice in 2008. "Good for her."

Drunken Hoff taken to hospital?

FAMILIAR STORY? Baywatch star David Hasselhoff was admitted to hospital Sunday after drinking heavily at his Encino, Calif., home, popeater.com reports.

TMZ reports that his 17-year-old daughter Hayley Hasselhoff called her mother Pamela for help, and one of her friends reportedly called an ambulance for Hasselhoff.

He was allegedly released that night.

Hayley famously filmed him falling-over drunk and eating from a plate on the floor in 2007, and put the footage on the Internet in an effort to shame him into changing his ways.

Amy risks a drug relapse?

SNAGGLE-TOOTHED NO MORE Amy Winehouse got her teeth fixed, but pals are worried the painkillers she's been given to cope with post-surgery might spark a relapse, according to the Sun.

"Amy's teeth were in a pretty gross state," a source said. "They were brown and stained and needed major work on them and she was determined to get them back to their sparkling best."

"It's left her in almost constant pain, but she thinks the sacrifice is worth it. She's been given some very strong drugs to cope with the pain," the source added.

Who will make Mischa's coffee?

NOW HIRING: COFFEE INTERN Mischa Barton is still making work on The Beautiful Life difficult, according to Page Six. An on-set source says Barton has been showing up to work so bleary-eyed, she's been holding up filming, and one day recently, she "kept demanding that someone make instant coffee for her."

"Often, she'll stare at the coffee for minutes at a time and say, 'Who will fix my coffee? I need someone to fix my coffee.'"

Fettuccine Alfredo

INGREDIENTS:

- 4 oz (125 g) uncooked fettuccine
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) butter
- 1 cup (250 ml) heavy whipping cream
- 1/4 cup (50 ml) plus 2 tbsp (25 ml) grated Parmesan cheese, divided
- 1/4 cup (50 ml) grated Romano cheese
- 1 egg yolk, lightly beaten
- 1/8 tsp (0.5 ml) salt
- Dash each pepper and ground nutmeg

METHOD:

1. Cook fettuccine according to package directions. Meanwhile, in pot, melt butter over medium-low heat. Stir in cream, 1/4 cup (50 ml) Parmesan cheese, Romano cheese, egg yolk, salt, pepper and nutmeg.

2. Cook and stir over medium-low heat until thermometer reads 160°F (71°C — do not boil). Drain fettuccine; top with Alfredo sauce and remaining Parmesan cheese.

ARIES
MARCH 21-APRIL 20
The answers you seek are not hard to find but you'll need help from those who have asked the same sort of questions before you.

TAURUS
APRIL 21-MAY 21
You won't lack for self-belief today but as mind planet Mercury is still moving retrograde you are advised to check facts and figures.

LIBRA
SEPT 23-OCT 23
Others may be having second thoughts about what you are doing but you have no doubts. Your momentum will keep you moving.

SCORPIO
OCT 24-NOV 22
You are prepared to risk anything to prove you are the best at what you do. Before the day is over almost everyone will be singing your praises.

GEMINI
MAY 22-JUNE 21
Family issues that have been causing you problems can quite easily be resolved, but you must stop putting them off.

SAGITTARIUS
NOV 23-DEC 21
You will get your way today but you will probably upset one or two people in the process. But that won't worry you in the slightest.

CANCER
JUNE 22-JULY 22
Mars in your birth sign does wonders for your confidence and you won't hesitate to speak up today if you feel you have something to say.

CAPRICORN
DEC 22-JAN 20
You won't lack for things to say over the next 24 hours, but make sure that any criticisms you have are justified and that your reasons for airing them are positive.

LEO
JULY 23-AUG 23
You will have to bluff your way through a situation you would usually cope with quite easily. Fortunately others expect you to be assured and outspoken.

AQUARIUS
JAN 21-FEB 18
With Mercury still moving retrograde, what others tell you they are going to do and what they actually do may be two different things today.

VIRGO
AUG 24-SEPT 22
Mercury back in your birth sign means you are not afraid to speak your mind, and it could lead to some interesting scenes.

PISCES
FEB 19-MARCH 20
You don't lack for ideas but you may lack the confidence to express them, and that's a shame because some of your ideas are quite brilliant.
